Bass River Notes

By Joyce Starratt

Hi everyone. My it's gotten cold awfully quick, hasn't it? I'm not getting very far in my fall work. I do some when I take Mi Mi for her run, if it isn't raining, but slow work, oh well, I suppose it will be there in the spring to keep me busy.

I have been to three musical events lately, J.P. Cormier in Economy; a tribute to Hank Snow in Parrsboro, and 1st night the 17th to hear a sacred concert by the Rev. Jay Ettinger, in support of the Canadian Diabetes Association.

It was at St Andrews Church, Truro. All three were very enjoyable. Thanks Hazel for inviting me.

No funerals to report. No illness to report either.

My neighbour, Lloyd Fulton and one of my friends, Merna (Campbell) Perry have birthdays this week. They will be 93 years old. Merna helped me learn some chords on the Hawaiian Guitar, when I was about 14. I wasn't allowed to spend by "beef" money on a guitar, until I could play some chords.

I went in after school, there weren't many guitars around at that time. But Merna's father played the fiddle and she accompanied him. I got my guitar and still have it. I paid $11.98 from T. Eaton's. Dad gave me 50 cents, so I could get the steel. Not much money for a side of beef in the 30's. It's a concert size guitar.

Brian MacDonald is home after working in NB for a few weeks. It's nice to see him home again. Barb Hood of Three Mile Plains spent the Thanksgiving weekend in Bass River. We had two Thanksgiving dinners at Brian and Linda's. Andrew couldn't be there for Thanksgiving day, so we had one the next day for him.

So long for now.
