The Soldiers Fell By Michaela Priest

*The street is like a sea of red,
Against these auburn leaves,
I'm hanging on to every word that is said,
Most people don't know what I've seen.*

*My mind flashes back to those brutal days,
When blood and bullets were flying,
The battlefield was covered in a smoky haze,
Which men were suspiciously eyeing.*

*Who would make the next brave move,
Us or the opposing side,
How could we possibly choose,
How can we sacrifice any more lives?*

*A horrible blast comes from the front lines
The earth shatters beneath our feet,
This happens oh so many times,
So many times each pitiful week.*

*I finger the poppy pinned to my chest,
A single tear slips from my eye,
Right now I am trying my absolute best,
To not just break down and cry.*

*Other people are sobbing as well,
While we are standing here row upon row,
Thinking about how the soldiers fell,
So I just give in and let the tears flow.*
