Department of Environment IS TO BLAME

Lunenburg, with its UNESCO designation, is an iconic destination. However there are two sides to the south shore town's problems. In the July 11th issue of the Chronicle Herald the front page details the troubles of Lunenburg Harbour with regard to raw sewage, yet the front page of the business section talks about a development plan is near finalization for the provinces only UNESCO designated municipality.

Don't get me wrong, I'm not picking on Lunenburg. That assumption is far from the remotest of consideration.

In the story about Lunenburg's harbour being in trouble, the opening line states, "Lunenburg Harbour will remain contaminated with sewage as long as there are no laws in place forcing anyone to clean up the pollution or to prevent it in the first place". The province is reported to be considering a coastal protection, but currently there is no provincial or federal act to regulate contamination.

To illustrate the severity of the problem, the Chronicle Herald article stated, "Health Canada states that levels of enterococci must be at or below 175 colonies per 100 milliliters of water to be safe for secondary contact, including sailing and fishing. The concentration falls to 70 colonies per 100 mL for swimming. The Inshore Fishermen's Wharf was tested only once, producing 1,600 colonies per 100 mL, more than nine times higher than the standard for safe secondary contact".

Engineering studies have been done, and more are planned, but it will take years to provide solutions. In short it's bizarre for government to spend money on streetscapes, without having a plan in place to prevent fecal pollution. The provincial Department of Environment is to blame.

The department of Environment lacks broad-based public support for its lack of leadership on matters which have consumed the public for decades. In Colchester North, there was lots of criticism of the department for its lack of action regarding the OSCO quarry in Little Dyke.

Similarly, lines have been drawn in the sand in the Pictou area over the pending closure of Boat Harbour and how the Abercrombie pulp mill plans to solve the problem by discharging the effluent via a treatment facility and elongated pipe into the Northumberland Strait. With application of modern technology scientists say the problem will be fixed.

The Department of Environment is pivotal in all of this. Because of decades of perceived inaction and lack of expertise and enforcement, the public doesn't trust the Department and would risk shutting down the mill than believing DOE officials.

McNeil's Liberals are in a crunch of what to do. All political parties must share blame for a situation which has persisted for almost 50 years. Since they all are party to the unfortunate situation, all provincial parties must work together with the federal government and community to find a solution.

Since 2015, particularly 2016 which saw the election of Donald Trump, the mood of the electorate has changed. Popular politics, the grants of the wishes of taxpayers has taken hold. The electorate is demanding their opinions be heard and heeded.

The situation in Pictou will be pivotal. There is no way the province, especially the forest sector, can permit the mill to close. Trust with DOE must be rebuilt. All parties must work together to consult with the public to make that happen.

Some way must be found to give the public assurances if the technology does not work, then activity will be stopped until a solution is found. In order for the public to be brought inside, they must have control to shut down the operation.

Times have changed. Doing politics the way it was done decades or even five years ago is history. The immediate role of all governments, provincial or federal, yes even municipal, must be to work hard to demonstrate they are representatives of the people, instead of having taxpayers financing government activity.

Premier McNeil must meet directly with residents of Pictou, and appoint them as "the board of directors" who ensure government departments implement regulations. If Premier McNeil can accomplish that, he will set the course for continued operation of the mill, and a road map to his party's re-election in the next election.

Along the Shore with Ruth

By Ruth Thompson

Hello again: I hope that everyone is enjoying the summer. Economy United Church Stewards held a very successful ham, salad and strawberry supper on July 7th. Everyone went away from the supper with full tummies.

Reverend Florence and her helpers had a very good time at Vacation Bible Camp week at the Economy Recreation centre from July 9th to the 12th. We had a total number of children all week of 32 children. Most of the children came most days. All enjoyed the camp. Snacks were provided by different members of the communities of Cobequid Charge. The theme of the camp was "Celebrating God's Creation. Thanks to Rev. Florence, Myrna Fisher, Darlene Smith, Linda Field, Debbie Moore and others for a job well done.

Mike Elliott came one day with his guitar to entertain the children. He was great and the children liked him. Thanks Mike. Bert Fulmore and Bill McLaughlin brought the fire truck, it was a great hit for the children and the older children, you who know who you are. The children had a great time climbing through the truck. The men did hook up the hose to show the children how it was done. Well done gentlemen. Thanks so very much for doing that for the children and the helpers. A BIG thank you goes out to Rev. Florence for all the time she puts into such an event.

Economy U.C.W catered to the funeral reception for Betty Spalding on July 8th. Family was pleased for the amount of People that attended.

On July 14th, there was a 75 KM yard sale from Onslow to Parrsboro. By the way the traffic was going along the road, the sale was well attended and vendors were happy. The yard sale is a great way for community groups to participate and raise a fair amount of money.

Five Islands Church had a successful yard sale on July 7th and again on July 14th.

The 10th Anniversary of the "Not since Moses" walk on the ocean floor was a huge success. There were participants from United Kingdom, United States, Germany, many other countries and several Canadian Provinces. It is amazing how many people travel thousands of miles from other countries to participate in the event.

The walk on the ocean floor is unique around the world and has become a major tourism attraction. Attendance at the municipally-owned but community operated Five Islands Lighthouse Park increases significantly with the largest tourism attraction along the shore. Everyone had a great time getting dirty from the mud in the Bay of Fundy.
