PORT GREVILLE Remembrance Day Service

Port Greville, like so many small rural communities sent many to the two great wars, and several did not return. Community volunteers worked hard to acquire Port Greville's own monument several years ago. Under sunny sky and relatively warm temperatures a large crowd attended the 2014 service and Barbara Aris was there to get photos for the Shoreline Journal.

Even though the sun was shining and temperatures were moderate, with a different camera angle, this photo captures some of the darkness in many people hearts as they attend and remember at Remembrance Day Services. Shown above are Sgt. Deanna Boutillier and Master Warrant Officer Brent Boutillier, daughter-in-law and son of Jackie and Gerald Boutillier paying their respects in memory of Brent's grandfather, Joudrey.

Walter Lake laying a wreath in memory of Hebert lake, Oscar McCully, Age of Sail Museum, Stan Dowe, and Owen Vaughan.

Escorted by young cadets, who are learning what Remembrance Day means, Pamela Harvey lays a wreath in memory of Perry Allan.

Like so many Maritime families they engage young children to participate in Remembrance Day Services, show here accompanied by local Cadets, Bruce and son Louis Fillmore proceed to lay a wreath in memory of grandfather, Edward Fillmore.
