The new datasets can be used to support research and commercial applications. New datasets include: details on community-based renewable energy projects funded through the Community Feed-in Tariff Program; data from Develop Nova Scotia's pedestrian counters on the Halifax waterfront data on usage and payments through provincial government dental programs and tourism statistics on visitors to Nova Scotia by road and monthly visitors to provincial visitor information centres. This year, there are 26 successful applicants to the province's Solar Electricity for Community Buildings Program. These non-profit organizations can now add solar electricity systems to their buildings and sell the energy generated to their local electricity utility under a 20-year contract. Community buildings projects can generate up to 75 kilowatts of electricity. Applicants propose a price per kilowatt hour. Clean Foundation independently evaluates submissions and selects the successful projects. 71 projects totalling 3.8 megawatts of electricity have been approved over the past three years; solar energy use in Nova Scotia has grown by about 300 per cent over the past two years and just over a year ago, there were 13 approved solar installers in the province. Today, there are 57 businesses and hundreds of new jobs. Program website and list of recipients: <https://novascotia.ca/solar/solar-electricity-community-buildings.asp>

this re-use campaign and their focus on reducing the amount of Plastic leaving their store. Another Nova Scotia based Company playing a leadership role in reducing waste. I do not want to appear to promote a certain company, but my involvement in solid waste and recycling provincially keeps me informed and in the loop and Sobeys is also involved in at least one other waste reduction pilot project, and once again deserves a tip of the hat.

While remaining on the single use bag theme, I expect most of you are aware The Province of Nova Scotia passed legislation to ban single use plastic bags. This legislation passed on Oct 30 2019 and will come into effect in 1 year. Much has been said and many have switched to reusable bags over the past couple of years. However, we have a long way to go to adjust before the ban comes in place.

First to say I am one of the offenders for lack of a better word. I always have reusable bags in the car, but more often than not I forget them in the car. One Saturday evening two weeks ago I sat in the foyer of Sobeys selling poppies and decided to track the number of customers using plastic. This is a long way from being scientific, because of course I spent a lot of time talking and selling poppies. However, I would estimate only one in every twelve used reusable bags. I do not think this is showing a lack of concern for the planet, but lack of training ourselves to take the bags with us.

On the Municipal side it has been a fairly busy month, but nothing really noteworthy. Spent four days in meetings in Halifax on Municipal solid waste, three days at annual meeting of Nova Scotia Federation of Municipalities along with other Municipal duties. The last week of November I am heading to Ottawa for FCM meetings and along with my colleagues beginning the process of advocating on behalf of Rural Municipalities to the new government.

Do not view this as me complaining, I actually enjoy this very much and appreciate the opportunities you have given me.

Tom

ing the Amherst Armouries and we are all in agreement that something must be done to save this historic landmark.

In closing, as the local Member of Parliament, along with the former MP Casey, provincial MLA Smith-Mc-

Crossin, the non-profit organization Amherst Armouries Plus Society, and the NS Heritage Trust, I would sincerely request that we be given the opportunity to discuss the future of the Amherst Armoury with you and any other representatives from the Department of Defence regarding our desire to acquire, preserve, and repurpose the building for imminent and ongoing future events.

Thank you for your time. I keenly await your response to Ms Smith-McCrossin's request to hold a fundraising gala in the Armoury for a great cause this New Year's (I for one would love to attend) and for a meeting at your earliest convenience.
