

TRURO Remembrance Day Service

Photos by D. Brown

With overcast skies and threatening rain, the Truro Cenotaph stood guard, as people flocked to the Legion Branch on Brunswick where conditions were much more comfortable.

On the right, Sgt. Jud Hull and on the left his Father, James Hull, member of the Royal Canadian Legion in Truro went to the cenotaph prior to going to the Legion on Brunswick Street to attend the Remembrance Day ceremonies.

Veterans and members of the Royal Canadian Legion prepare for ceremonies at the Legion on Brunswick Street. A large number of people filling the Auditorium and downstairs Lounge attended the Remembrance Day ceremonies.

Ceremonies for Remembrance Day were held at the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 26, due to overcast and rainy weather conditions. Despite the weather, people also showed up to pay their respects and lay wreaths at the Cenotaph on Prince Street in Truro.

Sgt. (Retired) Steve Murgatroyd was guest speaker for the Great Village Branch 72 Remembrance Day Banquet. He gave an excellent talk on the important work of volunteers within the Legion and the importance of sharing stories from past experiences with one another, to ensure we will all remember them.
