

Is There a Favourite Exhibit?

The museum exhibit gallery features stunning rocks, minerals, and fossils found regionally as well as internationally.

Is there a staff favourite exhibit? "Personally speaking, I'm very pleased with the full-body Coelophysis (see-lo-fy-sis) replica that we installed in March 2022.

I love that Nova Scotia has numerous footprints of these early theropod dinosaurs (who were ancestors to Velociraptor and T. rex) but being able to put a full-size skeleton on display is what really helps folks visualize what these critters might have looked like and how they moved while roaming the planet millions of years ago" shares Serratos.

"I also love that the Bay of Fundy's Indigenous stories are woven throughout the exhibits and includes Mi'kmaq oral histories and artifacts that tell of the region's geology.

The tools made of agate and the traditional lore of how Kluskap created coastal landmarks throughout Mi'kma'ki that we see today are integral parts of the life and landscape that is in what we now call Nova Scotia."

The Fundy Geological Museum is enthusiastically embarking on their 30th anniversary with commemorative all-ages events throughout the summer and a gala-style evening on November 25th.

The Fundy Geological Museum site also houses a gift shop, multi-purpose community room, outdoor amphitheatre, wheel-chair accessible picnic tables, accessible walking trail along the shore, and a community garden.
