Respect Ed Team members Michael MacRae, Emily Wilson, Anna Fullerton and Mallory Putnam(l to r) add finishing touches to a sea of pink hand prints. Every student at CCJH left their pink hand print on the cafeteria wall, taking a stand against bullying in their school. (Harrington Photo)

A drive on Farrell Road in Parrsboro had a pleasant surprise. The Smith family share their joy of life with all by dressing up a wooden model in seasonal outfits. Of course at this time of year we are greeted by one of Santa's helpers, but no matter the season the outfit changes to match the time. Thanks for putting a smile on our face as we drive by. The Aboiteau in Parrsboro hosts a variety of birds every spring to fall from black, buffle head and mallard ducks, kingfishers, herons and eagles, and in the last years Canada Geese have added their numbers to provide a fascinating scene, in my case from my back yard. At season's end the geese form up and their V flight patterns and loud honking fill the sky. It is unusual then that one goose is still resident on the Aboiteau. Whether it is unable to fly or waiting for a mate that doesn't materialize is a mystery, unfortunately for the goose the winter will likely offer little in the way of food. I hope that somehow it does takes flight soon and heads south while able. (Lawrence R. Nicoll Photo)
