KUGEL MESH – SURGICAL MESH PATCH

Kugel Mesh is a product used in surgical procedures. The product is distributed in Canada by Bant Canada Inc., an affiliate of C.R. Bard, Inc. and its subsidiary, Davol Inc. In the United States.

The Composix Kugel Mesh product has been recalled due to serious medical complications that have been linked to the use of this product. Perforation of the bowels and/or chronic intestinal fistulae – abnormal tissue growth between the intestines and other organs, are linked to the faulty product. Patients have suffered internal bleeding, infections, and in some cases death.

To determine if the Kugel Mesh patch was used in your surgery, the hospital records department where you had your surgery should have the product code labels. These labels are usually located in the hospital medical records pertaining to your surgical procedure.

Wagners is investigating claims from individuals who have had an abdominal hernia repair operation and received a Kugel surgical mesh patch since May 2000 to the present.

If you or someone you know has suffered as a result of the implantation of the Kugel Mesh patch, please contact Wagners.
