For each lap completed, the student earned a sticker on a province or territory on a map of Canada. Together everyone had a lot of fun, got some exercise, and collected $61.50 to support Terry's dream of finding a cure for cancer. Congratulations and thank you to all participants.

Memories from a Special Pine Tree

During Hurricane Dorian on September 8 & 9, the top of the eastern old white pine tree was torn off leaving only one lonely large branch and the bottom part of the pine tree. (Bridgewater Photo)

By Hope Bridgewater

Even though hurricane Dorian was downgraded to a post-tropical storm in Nova Scotia, it caused great damage to many in Nova Scotia. In this case, I am speaking as an individual resident in Wentworth. The storm took electricity and high winds for me from noon Saturday, September 7, until noon on Sunday.

The night experience was long enough to bring back memories of lantern light and in the morning many tree branches on the ground. All the work passed, but what remained otherwise was a strong memory of the old white pine tree that had its top blown off by heavy winds leaving only a single large branch and the bottom part of the tree. The eastern pine trees are the tallest trees in Nova Scotia and their life span can be 450 years.

The strong memory and the lasting sadness was this tree reminded me of my brother Bush who climbed this tree as an enclosed photo shows and sit on a branch. He was nicknamed Bush because while living on this farm he loved being outside in the woods and often climbing trees. In fact, the photo shows that the branch he sat on could be the one branch still shown with the stricken, topless tree.

Every morning before the storm came, I would almost as a ritual look out at this pine tree near the banks of the Wallace River not far from this house and momentarily think of Bush. Now I look out the window and see the top of the old pine tree gone with only one large branch still there and only the bottom section of the old pine tree.

I am very sad about the loss and I am, however, glad the branch and lower part of the pine tree are still there. I look at it and in a flash once again remember my brother and what he stood for with his love of nature, the outdoors, and the trees in the forest.

Later my brother Bush, after several years of working in the lumber woods and on this farm, decided to leave Wentworth to join the Royal Canadian Air Force.
