

Young and old pitched in with the cleanup of yards throughout the communities. Eight year old Finlay Harrington was a big help driving and dumping the wheelbarrow. (Harrington Photo)

All ages were ready to help with the hurricane debris cleanup. Evelyn Harrington was enjoying helping out her grandparents by raking up the lawn. (Harrington Photo)

Finlay Harrington kept busy making forts from the downed trees while school was closed for the week after Fiona. (Harrington Photo)

The steeple on Saint James United Church was damaged during the hurricane and within a few days it was removed and the roof sealed off. Angel's Diner on the Corner was back up an operational once power was restored. (Harrington Photo)

Chamber's Micro Grant Funding
 The Truro & Colchester Chamber is announcing a funding program intended to provide financial aid to registered businesses and non-profits with store-front, physical locations to improve the interior or exterior signage and beautify properties to improve curb appeal thereby attracting residents and visitors to their location while creating more welcoming environments. The Micro Grant funding is available on a first-come, first-approved basis.

Support for Emergency Services Providers
 The Province is investing more than $1 million to help first responder organizations purchase safety equipment needed to help and protect people and communities.
 "Our volunteer first responders have an essential role in the safety of our communities, and I thank them for their dedication and commitment," said Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister John Lohr. "They put countless hours into training and responding to emergencies. This funding will help ensure they have the tools and equipment needed to keep them safe."
 The Emergency Services Provider Fund offers funding to fire departments and ground search and rescue organizations, including hazardous materials teams, to upgrade equipment that is used directly in response to a fire or other emergency.
