Jordan Sprague Leaves Wentworth for Toronto

Jordan Sprague, at nineteen years still a teenager, leaves life on a farm in Wentworth located in a community of 500 people and a paid summer job at the Wentworth C@PSite to attend to Ryerson University, located in one of the busiest areas of Toronto, the largest city in Canada. Jordan is studying for a Bachelor of Journalism degree and hopes to become a Broadcast TV journalist.

At the C@PSite Jordan was very knowledgeable about the many ways all the equipment worked (free Internet Access, scanning, GPS, etc.), conducted a youth group program, and taught computer literacy to all ages. He also had the personality and stamina to handle it all very well.

Jordan is a fine example of many teenagers who leave Nova Scotia for training, but who also remember well where they were born and raised. Jordan has returned for several summers to work at a paid position at the Wentworth C@PSite and is very loyal to this computer centre and how well it helps the people of Wentworth.

Jordan and others in Wentworth are very unhappy with the decision of the federal government to cut all funding for C@PSites across Canada. Before Jordan went back to Toronto, he decided to form a Committee of friends and raise funds to help the C@PSite for the coming fall, winter, and spring when the C@PSite depends on volunteer people for staffing, but also with a need to buy supplies for operation. The Committee of nine people decided to sell tickets for a large lobster and other prizes and to hold a Casino Night at the Wentworth Recreation Centre.

The Planning Committee of nine consisted of Jordan Sprague, Joanne Ferdinand, Melanie Sprague, Wee Wana Sprague, Felicia MacKinnon, Carol Hyslop, Kathy Redmond, Stephen Ferdinand, and Ryan Ferdinand. All the members of the Committee came early to prepare the meal, work in the kitchen, and staff the tables for the games of Black jack, Texas Holdem, Roulette, Craps, Number Bingo, and Poker. Three other friends joined in to help the Committee: Christine Henderson, Laurel Adams, and Ben Ferdinand

The Casino Night was a success in that it raised a significant amount of funding and gave a night of fun for all those attending. The small Committee worked hard preparing the meal: Spaghetti and Meatballs and a dessert of Cream Puffs topped with whipped cream, fruit and chocolate drizzle. Everyone commented on its superb flavour. The games were very entertaining with Committee members staffing the tables.

Now that Jordan Sprague has gone, the C@PSite hours are now reduced to two hours of volunteer time on Sunday from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Director Carol Hyslop is hoping more people can volunteer their time in order for the C@PSite to be open through the week.

Jordan Sprague still connects with his home community of Wentworth by maintaining his position as Editor of the Wentworth Community Newsletter, and he sends the Newsletter home for final printing. In this way he keeps informed about what is happening back home and the Wentworth people, who are delivered the Newsletters free in their mail boxes, also keep abreast of all the upcoming events.
