Tesla will quadruple size of Canadian Supercharger network. The electric car maker plans to install new chargers coast to coast, bolstering its Canadian charging network as the mass-market Model 3 rolls out. Tesla Inc. is adding nearly 100 new Canadian stops to its growing network of charging stations—a major expansion that will more than quadruple the number of Superchargers in Canada and convert its patchy current charging network into a coast-to-coast system. Overall, the project will increase the number of Superchargers in Canada from under 30 to nearly 120. Ontario is in for by far the largest expansion, while both Quebec and B.C. will see their networks more than double. Meanwhile, to allow Tesla drivers to bridge the current dead zone between Ontario cottage country and Calgary, Saskatchewan and Manitoba will be getting their first Supercharger stations. Tesla also plans to build its first handful of charging stations in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, meaning Model S, Model X or Model 3 owners can rely on the network coast to coast—though it's still largely limited to busy traffic arteries.

Nova Scotia Business Inc. (NSBI) has announced two newly approved productions through the Nova Scotia Film and Television Production Incentive Fund. A feature film, Splinters, produced by Conciliatory Pictures Inc., has been approved for a funding commitment of $294,500 based on eligible Nova Scotia expenditure of $950,000. A documentary, Radical Age, produced by Tell Tale Productions Inc., has been approved for a funding commitment of $126,474 based on eligible Nova Scotia expenditure of $459,905. More details about productions approved for incentives through the Nova Scotia Film and Television Production Incentive Fund are available on the NSBI website at www.nsbic.ca/filmfunding.

Truro Presbyterial UCW Fall Rally

By Chris Urquhart

The Truro Presbyterial UCW Fall Rally will be held on Tuesday October 10th at Brunswick St. United Church in Truro. Registration is from 9:30 to 10 am.

Theme is "O Happy Days" and it looks like a fun filled day! Barb Burley and Noreen Stark have created the program so bring a bag lunch, lug a mug and come out for a day to remember!

There will be a Book Display so come and get some of those wonderful napkins, cards and books they always have for sale! All ladies are welcome at this rally; you don't have to be a UCW member!

Enjoy an Eco-Friendly Autumn

Autumn arrives with cool breezes, awe-inspiring foliage and the hint of holidays on the horizon. Fall is a favorite time of year for many people because the crisp weather motivates people of all ages to enjoy the great outdoors.

Individuals conscious of their carbon footprints can use fall as a time to take inventory of their behaviors and make changes where necessary. The following are some steps to take right now that fit perfectly with the harvest season.

- Shop at a local farm stand. Take advantage of the many roadside stands that crop up this time of year where you can find bushels of apples, pumpkins, gourds, and late-summer vegetables. After a day of sightseeing, visit a farm stand for warm cider and freshly baked doughnuts. Buying local produce reduces reliance on foreign-shipped foods and other products, while also cutting back on the fuel consumed to get foods from the farm to the table.
- Use nature to decorate. Skip plastic, mass-produced decorations and rely on nature to dress up your home. Fill vases with leaves and berries. Place small pumpkins on mantles, and enrich the landscape of your home with vibrantly hued mums and other cool-weather plants. Corn husks and stalks can add harvest flair to front porches. Twigs nestled and tied together can make interesting table centerpieces.
- Create a composting pile. Outdoor chores are easier in cool weather than they are when the mercury rises. Set aside a place in the yard for composting. A healthy compost pile should have roughly two-thirds carbon (brown) materials and one-third nitrogen (green) materials, says EarthEasy.com. Use those lawn clippings and raked leaves to make compost for spring plantings.

- Visit a corn maze. After corn has been harvested, farm owners often use their land for supplemental income. Corn mazes can be simple or complex depending on visitors' ages. Engage in family bonding outside and turn off electronics in the process.
  - Bake your own pie. After a fun-filled day picking apples at a nearby orchard, head home and use those locally sourced apples to whip up a delicious pie.
  - Recycle old clothes to dress your scarecrow. Clothing that is not worthy of donation can be transformed into a festive scarecrow just in time for Halloween hijinks. Fill out the body of the scarecrow with newspaper and then add some pieces of straw around the neck, hands and feet.
  - Host a football party. Watch the game on television or have a pickup game in the yard. Serve finger foods to cut down on the need for plastic or paper plates and flatware. Purchase a keg of beer from a local brewery to eliminate individual beer cans and bottles. Set out a non-alcoholic punch bowl so the kids can enjoy refreshments, too.
- Autumn can be a great time of year to embrace some eco-friendly practices.
