Murray Giddens Cutting Firewood

Murray Giddens was anxious for an opportunity to fire up his vintage woodsaw during the open house held at his farm on July 27th. Fred McKinnon, of Debert, originally built the saw, which was used to cut long wood. Murray said, "Just give me a minute, there is no electric start" and within a few minutes he had the machine hissing and the belts humming.

Murray gets ready to pull the lever to cut the first log.

Sawdust was flying as the blade cut through the log.

A length of firewood falls off the conveyor belt, just the right size for the wood stove. (Photo series by Linda Harrington)

The Shoreline Journal is gaining prominence within the Atlantic Community Newspaper Association, which represents 65 member community newspapers throughout Atlantic Canada. At the association's 38th annual conference, held in Halifax, May 28 and 29th. Tom MacLean, left, who joined the Shoreline Journal as a sales representative in April 2010 was recognized as the Top 2009 adAtlantic sales person of the year, for the second year in a row. Maurice Rees, publisher is shown on the right with a certificate for being one of three finalists in the "Best Designed Advertisement". The 1/2 page ad for "That Dutchman's Farm", was published in the June 2009 edition and competed against over 40 other entires. (D. Rees Photo)
